Yoga breathing and meditation, especially when practiced together, make us feel vibrant and alive, yet calm, relaxed, and peaceful at the same time. How does it work? Focusing on our breath activates the parasympathetic nervous system, helping us let go of the stress we experience in our daily lives and returning us to our natural state of calm. The moment we begin to observe our breath, it naturally begins to slow down and deepen. We can enhance this process with yoga breathing techniques—consciously slowing and lengthening the breath (always within our comfort range of course—never gasping for breath). This takes some mental focus, which can be challenging since the mind is always jumping from one thing to another.

E-Learning

E-Learning

Advancement in Information Technology has led to changes in teaching and learning processes of many educational institutions across the globe, which provides reliable, convenient and easily accessible environment that is conducive for learning. This study carried out an assessment of AIVET E-Learning System to study the flaws associated with its existing utilization analysis process/ methods of the system as well to determine the requirement to be considered for the development of a framework for utilization analysis process. The utilization analysis of E-Learning Systems is associated with a lot of potentials: monitoring of users activities on the learning management system for the purpose of continue improvement of the E-learning System in order to enhance users experience on the platform. It can also provide up to date information which can be useful to the council management to make an effective and efficient decision which can transform teaching and learning processes positively in the University. We therefore developed e-learning utilization analysis framework based on the findings of this study. All the parameters considered in the newly developed framework are very significant and could be useful for future design of e-learning systems. eLearning, or electronic learning, is the delivery of learning and training through digital resources. Although eLearning is based on formalized learning, it is provided through electronic devices such as computers, tablets and even cellular phones that are connected to the internet. This makes it easy for users to learn anytime, anywhere, with few, if any, restrictions. Basically, eLearning is training, learn-ing, or education delivered online through a computer or any other digital device. Self-regulated learning refers to several concepts that play major roles in learning, and which have significant relevance in e-learning. explains that in order to develop self-regulation, learning courses should offer opportunities for students to practice strategies and skills by themselves. Self-regulation is also strongly related to a student's social sources such as par-ents and teachers. Moreover, Steinberg (1996) found that high-achieving students usually have high-expectation parents who monitor their children closely. With the academic environment, self-regulated learners usually set their academic goals and monitor and react themselves in process in order to achieve their goals. Moreover, academic self-regulation also helps students develop confidence in their ability to perform well in e-learning courses.

The lessons are developed by highly qualified faculty members across the universities and are continually edited and reviewed, primarily by discipline- expert Fellows employed to edit, oversee and coordinate the content. The content goes through several levels of rigorous peer reviewing and academic vetting to ensure quality and standardization. AIVET also contains multimedia repository in form of audio, video and short films to expose students to new technologies in pedagogy.
